About Me

What I Do at MSK

- Chief, Geriatrics Service

Get To Know Me

I am board-certified in internal medicine and geriatric medicine and am the first Chief of the Geriatrics Service at Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center (MSK). The Geriatrics Service, established within the Department of Medicine in 2009, provides comprehensive, patient-centered care to older people with cancer.

Unlike just a few years ago, oncologists now commonly offer cancer treatment to people in their 80s and even 90s. Many patients in this age group have health conditions other than cancer that require special attention during the cancer treatment journey. As a result, they may be taking many different types of medicine and seeing multiple doctors by the time they come to MSK to pursue cancer treatment. As an internist with specialty training in geriatrics, I have expertise in treating these complex cases. I take the time to learn who each of my patients is, not just as a patient, but as a person. I listen to their concerns, answer their questions, and offer thoughtful, intuitive guidance that can help prevent avoidable complications.
