About Me

Jason S. Lewis

What I Do at MSK

- Emily Tow Chair in Oncology
- Vice Chair for Research, Department of Radiology
- Chief, Radiochemistry and Imaging Sciences Service
- Director of the Radiochemistry and Molecular Imaging Probe Core Facility

Get To Know Me

I am Vice Chair for Research, Chief of the Radiochemistry and Imaging Sciences Service, and Director of the Radiochemistry and Molecular Imaging Probe Core Facility. I head a laboratory in the Sloan Kettering Institute's molecular pharmacology program and am a professor at the Gerstner Sloan Kettering Graduate School of Biomedical Sciences. I have published more than 200 papers, books, book chapters, and reviews on cancer imaging. I serve on grant review panels for the National Institutes of Health and National Cancer Institute and a number editorial boards.

I am researching new ways to use PET imaging to diagnose cancer as well as developing new radioimmunotherapies for treating this disease. My research is supported by the National Institutes of Health, the Department of Education, and philanthropy.

My Role at MSK

A radiochemist is a doctor and scientist who studies radioactive elements.

Clinical Trials

Find a Clinical Trial for You

Memorial Sloan Kettering's doctors and scientists are constantly developing new treatments for cancer. MSK is typically running hundreds of clinical trials at a given time.

You may be able to participate in a clinical trial even if you are new to MSK. Search our online directory to find trial information and see more about who can participate.

Disclosures

Doctors and faculty members often work with pharmaceutical, device, biotechnology, and life sciences companies, and other organizations outside of MSK, to find safe and effective cancer treatments, to improve patient care, and to educate the health care community.

MSK requires doctors and faculty members to report (“disclose”) the relationships and financial interests they have with external entities. As a commitment to transparency with our community, we make that information available to the public.
