TRUDY N. SMALL SYMPOSIUM: Immune Reconstitution Post Transplantation

EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES

This symposium will:

1. Provide up-to-date assessment of current knowledge regarding the infections and other clinical problems associated with impaired or delayed immune reconstitution following an allogeneic hematopoietic cell transplant administered for a lethal genetic immune deficiency or a hematologic malignancy or marrow failure syndrome.
2. Present current knowledge regarding the cellular interactions between donor hematopoietic and lymphoid cells and the tissues and Thymus of the transplanted host that influences the kinetics and qualities of reconstitution of cell mediated and antibody-based immunity.
3. Present current results of new therapeutic approaches including cytokines, drugs and cellular therapies to accelerate or compensate for immune deficiencies in the post transplant period associated with high risk of lethal infection and/or disease relapse.

Participants will obtain:

- Better knowledge of transplant risks and potential preventive measures.
- Better knowledge of currently available treatments and developing therapeutic options to counter the risks of infection and disease relapse associated with impaired immune reconstitution.
- Better knowledge of patient and donor characteristics that increase and decrease risk of impaired or delayed immune reconstitution and associated risk of severe or lethal infection.
